Fourth graders explored ways to draw people in one-point perspective. They used a variety of elements and principles of design to make their drawings unique.

Third grade students learned about the legend of the Koi Fish, which tells the story of how a single koi became so determined to jump a waterfall that once it did, it was rewarded by the heavens and turned into a dragon. Koi have since become a symbol of overcoming adversity. Enjoy the colorful koi fish compositions students created using oil pastels and watercolor.

First and second graders learned about artist Claude Monet and created some waterlily collages inspired by his variety of waterlily paintings.
