

October 2020 Newsletter

Hello Meadowbrook Families,

It's hard to believe that it is almost conference time. I will be available for conferences on my web ex space. The link to go on that space is at the bottom of this section. I will be available the following days:

October 15 4:30-7:30

October 20 5:45-7:30

October 22 4:30-7:30

I have had some parents reach out to me and ask for specific times and that is also a good option. My email is cgahan@waukesha.k12.wi.us. If you do use the web ex link and I do not answer, I may be in a call with another family. I will be checking my emails frequently on conference nights if you are not able to connect via web ex. Below is the link to the web ex space.

MAP Update

For the last 3 weeks, Meadowbrook students have been taking the MAP tests on their iPads. Typically they are taken in the Winter and Spring, but teachers were not able to administer them this past Spring and it was determined that they will be given this year in the Fall, Winter and Spring. Today is the last day of the MAP testing window. Those scores will be printed and sent home with students on Wednesday next week. If you have any questions regarding how to interpret the scores, I will share some links below that you may find helpful.

It also includes helpful tips regarding how to help students raise those scores.
